Kilgore Insurance would like to make a statement towards our suit with the Attorney General. They fail to mention that the suit was divided into two parts. One being the "violation of consumer protection laws" in which Mr. Crowther was found guilty of violating the laws and Kilgore was found innocent of violating any consumer protection laws.

The Kilgores were not part of any scheme that Mr. Crowther invented on his own volition.

We were not allowed by Judge Ball to have the second phase of the trial. We were found guilty on a complicated legal theory named Apparent Authority. This is what we appealed.

Kilgore Insurance only provided secretarial service to Mr. Crowther, and in the 15 years Mr. Crowther was in our office neither owner of Kilgore ever spoke to Mr. Crowther's customers.

Not one Kilgore customer was involved in this case.
